

DID YOU KNOW?

CANNABIS EDITION

Cannabis edibles (commonly called 'edibles') are food or drink products that contain cannabinoids, like THC, which is the part of the cannabis plant that causes a high.

In recent years, calls about child cannabis poisonings at the Wisconsin Poison Center have increased. Most of these poisonings happen by accident, with edibles being the most common type of exposure.

Edibles come in many forms, such as candies, cookies and drinks. Their packaging often looks like popular brands that kids know, so it's easy to confuse them with regular food or candy. This makes safe storage of these products very important.

TALK TO YOUR KIDS ABOUT THEIR RISKS

LOCK UP PRODUCTS

STORE PRODUCTS
'UP AND AWAY'

CALL THE POISON CENTER